Will Probe Senate Race in Arkansas Says Committee

Charges by McClellan to Be Aired in U. S. Senate

EVIDENCE COLLECTED

Homer M. Adkins, Collector of Internal Revenue, Involved

WASHINGTON —(AP)—The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee disapproved Thursday with the statement of Secretary Morgenthau that charges of political activity by federal employees in Arkansas "were without basis" and said it would take the case to the Senate.

In the recent Democratic primary, Representative McClellan, opponent of Senator Caraway for the Democratic senatorial nomination, charged that Homer M. Adkins, collector of internal revenue, and other federal officers in the state were unduly active politically.

The committee sent the charges to Secretary Morgenthau who replied that similar evidence previously had reached the department and been found to be without basis.

The committee said its investigators had collected sufficient data upon which it would base recommendations to the senate. It issued a brief statement saying:

"In reference to the charge of undue political activity on the part of the internal revenue collector for Arkansas and of other federal officials in Arkansas, the committee sees no further need for investigation and at the proper time will make its statement of findings and recommendations to the senate."

Senator Sheppard (Dem., Texas), chairman, said the statement meant the committee had sufficient data on which to base recommendations.

Maryland Case
The committee told Secretary Morgenthau in sharp language that he was wrong in approving political activity by the internal revenue collector at Baltimore, and that it would ask the senate to act on the case.

The collector, M. Hampton Magruder, has acknowledged telling non-civil service employees in his office that he intended to support Representative David J. Lewis, later defeated for the Democratic senatorial nomination by Senator Millard E. Tydings.

When the senate committee called Morgenthau's attention to this recently, he said the collector's action was proper and had his approval.

Action Violation of Law
To this, Chairman Sheppard replied:

"The committee does not agree with the position taken by the secretary. On the contrary, the committee believes the action of the collector of internal revenue was a violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of the law; that

HARD BATTLE SEEN

Teams Are About Equally Matched—Large Crowd Is Expected

The Hope High School band and pep squad will stage a parade and pep rally in downtown Hope at 6:45 p. m. Friday as a prelude to the Hope-DeQueen football game at 8 o'clock which promises to be a hardfought battle.

The band will assemble at First Baptist church and from that point will proceed through the business section. The parade and student pep rally will last about half an hour.

Because of much rivalry between the two schools, the atmosphere grew tense as game-time neared. The teams, both undefeated, will attempt to keep their records intact.

DeQueen grid teams always put up one of their hardest battles against Hope. Only two years ago the Leopards came to town and knocked the Bobcats for a loop that left them stunned for days.

The squads, according to the best information available, will be nearly equal in weight. A large crowd is expected to witness the game.

Samuels, Daniels and R. Taylor Ineligible

The Hope Board of Education Friday ruled ineligible three first-string football players and ordered them withdrawn from the Bobcat squad, following a conference with the Arkansas Athletic Association.

The players who are dropped are: Quarterback Tommy Samuels, Fullback Jimmy Daniels, and Center Roy Taylor.

DeQueen Star Out
DE QUEEN, Ark.—Coach Oliver Criswell said Thursday that aside from the loss of "P" Cole, the Leopards' big crushing quarterback, who is out with an injured shoulder, the team is in good condition and keyed for its battle with the Hope Bobcats at Hope Friday night. Dr. C. C. Hanchey, team physician, said it would be next week before the extent of Cole's injury could be determined. The shoulder is being heat treated.

Bourne, who has been playing at halfback will take over in the backfield, calling the signals, punting, passing and handling the running plays. It is likely that Williams will be sent into the other back position, although Hawthorne has worked in the backfield some this week, with Fisher taking his place at guard.

Another shift that may be made when the team takes the field at Hope will be that of moving Thomas from end to tackle and starting Bakenhus at the wing position.

Leopards' Record Clear
The Leopards have chalked up three victories this season, even though the scores have not been so impressive. They opened by defeating Warren 13 to 0. The following week a 6 to 0 victory was won from Dierks and last Saturday the local boys climbed to their greatest heights of the season to defeat the powerful Catholic High Rockets at Little Rock, 6 to 0, thus keeping the Leopard goal line uncrossed for the season to date.Band, Pep Squad Going
The De Queen school band, pep squad, and a large delegation of fans are expected to make the journey to Hope. Game time there is 8 p. m., and the drive requires from two to three hours, via Nashville, Oan and Washington. The high bats are expected to be in evidence on the DeQueen side.

A school bus will be operated to carry student boosters, at 10c each for the round trip.

As a result of the mishap the fuhrer issued a general order that Nazi party leaders henceforth would be held personally responsible for seeing that flowers were taken away from all persons along the line of march.

Open the Mind and Let a Little Logic In

American newspapers have had a good deal to say lately about the "betrayal" of Czechoslovakia. England and France, so the story goes, have sold the little country down the river, and have cravenly made peace with Hitler by ignoring their responsibilities.

Well, this all may be true enough. The Czechs have had a raw deal, and the big muscle-man of Europe is riding high, wide and handsome. But it hardly becomes Americans to say too much about it.

Responsibilities in this Czech affair go back a long way—20 years or more, to the time when the nation was put together out of the wreckage of Austria-Hungary. And it just happens that it was the United States that was largely responsible for it.

The plan for a Czech nation was evolved in this country and was put over by President Wilson. The Czech constitution was framed in the United States. The League of Nations, devised to see that differences such as the one now raging between Czechoslovakia and Germany were settled peacefully, was pretty largely an American invention.

So if we are going to do any talking about responsibility for what happens to the Czechs, we can't escape taking a share of that responsibility ourselves. It is nearly 20 years since we decided that we didn't want any of that responsibility. We stayed out of the League of Nations and refused to ratify the Versailles treaty. Since then we have repeatedly insisted that we were going to follow a policy of isolation.

Certainly it is our privilege to act that way. Probably it is the wisest course we could follow.

But we ought to be consistent. We can't logically blame other nations for making the same sort of decision that we made years ago, or for ducking a responsibility which we ourselves have ducked long since.

The trouble with us is that we want to have it both ways. We want to stay out of trouble in Europe—and let's pray that we succeed—but we also want to hand out a lot of free advice to other nations on how they should act.

Such a course doesn't make sense. Isolation implies indifference to what happens abroad. If we are going to stick to isolation as a policy, we might well start cultivating an attitude of indifference. For if Europe's quarrels are none of our concern—well, then there isn't any logic in getting concerned about them.

Coloring, Flavoring, Preservatives Among Subjects of Federal Control

(This is the last of five articles by Dr. Fisher, discussing the powers of protection afforded by the new food and drug legislation in the United States.)

Officials of the Food and Drug Administration who are responsible for the enforcement of the new Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act are convinced that the public has much more protection under these new regulations than under previous laws.

There are some additional regulations which are of importance to the public and which have not been mentioned in the general considerations already published.

The new law prohibits the addition of poison to food except where such addition is required in the production of the food and cannot be avoided by any good manufacturing process. In such instances the administration may authorize the addition of certain definite amounts of such substances, limiting the amount to a point at which protection of the public itself will be assured.

For example, it may be necessary to spray fruits and vegetables in order to keep off destructive parasites. It may be necessary to add preservatives to certain syrups or canned goods, cat-sups or sauces.

The new law forbids traffic in candies which contain metallic tinctures or other inedible substances.

Whenever artificial coloring, artificial flavoring, or chemical preservatives are added to foods, the amounts must be declared on the label, except that butter, cheese, and ice cream are no compelled to carry any statement about artificial coloring.

The new law requires that substances sold as antiseptics actually be capable of destroying germs.

It does not permit the use of containers for foods, drugs, and cosmetics when these containers may render the contents injurious to health.

It prohibits the sale of foods, drugs, and cosmetics which have been prepared or handled under unsanitary conditions.

Moreover, the new law prohibits slack filling of containers or the use of deceptive containers.

Remember that most of the provisions of the law do not become effective for one year; because of the menace to life and health indicated by recent events, certain prohibitions have become immediately effective. One of these was the prohibition against drugs which are dangerous to health when used in the dosage or with the frequency or duration prescribed, recommended, or suggested in the labeling.

The second was the prohibition against the introduction of new drugs before an application for such introduction becomes effective. The third was the prohibition against cosmetics which may be injurious to users under the conditions of use prescribed in the labeling or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Obviously, these new laws have opened up a great new territory for investigation and study by governmental officials. Until many of the sections have been tried and tested in the courts, it will be difficult to know just how far the powers of the law extend.

There still remain, and are still being sold on the shelves of drug stores, grocery stores, department stores, and other places, many products in the food, drug and cosmetic field which obviously do not comply with the Wheeler-Lea Act or with the new Food, Drug and Cosmetics Law. No doubt, however, the mere presence of these laws on the books will have a salutary effect on manufacturers and mediums of public opinion.

The public can aid the government by calling to the attention of federal officials any obvious violations of the law which may come to individual notice.

RAISING A FAMILY

Dad's a Star By Which Son Sets His Own Personality

Because boys have little contact with men until they are older, you will have to be a whole army yourself, father.

Think it over. Just what men does Junior know? The principal of his school, and perhaps a teacher. He knows the fathers of his chums, but maybe not very well. A relative or two. Tradespeople, the group at the corner, the big fellows on the team. Just the usual contacts of a boy's life.

A certain portion of his casual older acquaintances will be gentlemen, no matter what their walk of life. The postman, the gas station attendant, the soda clerk. No need to go on.

We can't preach gentility to a boy. He has to live with it to absorb it. He has to see you step back time after time and let mother go first. Has to soak in your quiet, sure voice. He must drink a daily brew of even temper, good neighborliness, fastidious habits and so on, ad infinitum, to have it enter his system and stay there.

Boys are hero worshipers. Suppose there is one person that Jimmy sees frequently enough and admires enough to want to copy. It may be Bill Smith who rocketed the ball over the fence and got nice big letters on his shirt. Bill is grown up, practically. And Bill may have the general finesse and polish of a hog.

But if home fixes the instinct of fine breeding, then other worshipers can't do much harm. Or other examples of conduct really enter his system to stay.

Jimmy—and this will mislead you—won't be a person of courtliness just because you are a gentleman father. He'll likely go on practicing with his fast-growing front teeth to spit or whistle. He will bang doors and grab the biggest piece of cake. He'll stick his chewing gum under his chair.

Mechanics Built The New World

America's unity is due less to the work of far-seeing patriots than to the achievement of inventors and technicians. The nation became one only because mechanical improvements, appearing magically at the right moments, made possible the trying together of its sprawling sections in spite of the natural forces which tended to drive them apart.

So says Roger Burlingame in "March of the Iron Men" (Scribner's: $3.75), an interesting book which approaches American history from a new angle—and which probably will influence the orthodox historians.

We owe our very existence to inventors, says Mr. Burlingame; we could not, for one instance, have won the revolution without the Pennsylvania rifle. This gun, outraging the clumsy muskets of the British troops, made up for the colonists' lack of discipline and equipment.

The steamboat made possible re-creation of the vast Mississippi valley and the northwest territory. Colt's revolver made possible the winning of the west. And Eli Whitney, if his cotton gin fastened slavery on the south and so indirectly produced the Civil War, made northern triumph certain by devising the first principles of mass production which gave the north its preponderance of strength.

The railroad picked up where the steamboat left off tied east and west together, and made it certain that the

CHAPTER V

TAIT turned quickly to see how Anne would receive the news that there had been a revolver in Myrna's bag. Even in the dim light from the instrument panel he could see her face blanch.

"That's—not true!"

"It is, though," Tait said. "Did Myrna own a gun?"

"Never that I knew of," Anne answered quickly. "Someone was trying to make her seem the guilty one."

"I hope you're right. But shooting Ludden Dombey and getting that gun into Myrna's bag before the lights went on would be a neat trick. And, if she wasn't implicated in some way, why has she run away?"

Anne sighed. "Heaven knows why. But it isn't because she had anything to do with it. I know that. I'd bet my very life on it."

They lapsed into silence, and Bob Tait pressed the coupe hard. They had long since left gasoline stations and roadside stands. Farmhouses were growing fewer. Soon they were in a country of vast rolling hills, with an occasional tree standing eerily in the darkness.

"I'd forgotten there was country like this," Tait said suddenly. "Reminds me of when I was a kid. But I liked it better in the daytime, then—and I think I still prefer some light on it."

ANNE shuddered involuntarily.

"It is lonely. I wonder if I haven't been wrong, getting us out here."

"I'm afraid you have, pal. I can't imagine Myrna rushing out here in a rented car or a cab—stay alone in a shack."

"She wouldn't be afraid. Oh—I hope we're right."

"And so do I," breathed Tait fervently. "If this is a wild goose chase we've lost some valuable time." He looked at the girl beside him. "And if ever I find you were leading me along the wrong path purposely I'll wring your neck with my bare hands."

Anne was not resentful of Tait's doubt. She merely said, "I'm more anxious to find Myrna than anyone."

The countryside grew more hilly, and Tait had to resort to time and again to the car's second gear. "We're getting near," Anne said at last. "There's a fork in the road just along here. Take the road to the left."

In the next quarter of a mile Tait's lights picked out the fork, and his hand pulled the steering wheel abruptly to the left. The road grew narrower and more rutted. "Are you sure we're right?" he asked, slowing down. "This looks to me like one of those roads that peter into a lane."

Anne was peering through the windshield. "I'm sure this is the road. The cottage is right up there on that hill. It—" She stopped suddenly and pointed. "Look! There's a light! She's there!"

Tait increased his speed. "Good!" He scanned the darker outline of hill above them. "I don't see any light. Are you sure?"

"Positive. We'll probably see it again at the next curve in the road."

"I wonder if we ought to go the rest of the way on foot?" Tait mused. "We might frighten her out of the cottage. After all, she doesn't know you and I are out here after her."

Anne nodded. "You won't be able to drive much further, anyhow. We'll come to a fence-line, and the rest of the way is along a footpath."

EVEN as she spoke, the fence loomed ahead, and the road ended without ceremony. Tait turned the ignition switch and the lights. "Can you find the path?" he said in a low voice.

Anne was quietly opening the door of the car. "Yes. But we should be able to see the light from here. She must have turned it out. I couldn't have been seeing things back there on the road."

Tait nodded grimly, and slid out of the car behind Anne. They started through the darkness. Tait held firmly to Anne's arm to keep her from stumbling, but he had to let himself be guided. Somehow Anne managed to follow the path.

A host of worried thoughts fretted through Bob Tait's head. Nothing but the sheerest sort of desperation, or a mind temporarily unhinged, could have made a girl like Myrna seek this place. And if she were desperate, and that desperation was caused by guilt, then what would keep her from shooting them down as they stole along the path in the darkness? If she had been burning a light, as Anne insisted, and had extinguished it, then she must have seen or heard the car. She must know that the cottage was being sought.

Suddenly Tait held Anne from a further forward step. "This is foolish," he whispered. "There's no telling what that girl may do next. You'd better let her know who you are."

Anne nodded. There in the darkness she called Myrna's name clearly. It echoed and re-echoed. But there was no answer from the cottage shrouded in blackness. "That's okay," Tait said. "At least she knows you're here. She's probably being cautious, but she won't be trying any fireworks. Let's get going. My hunch is that we've been talking to thin air, and that the light you saw was a firefly. Anyhow, we—"

TAIT stopped, clutched Anne's arm. Unmistakably, there was a thrashing in the brush near the shack. Yet Tait was positive that the door had not opened since the dwelling had come into their view. Anne heard it, too, and stood back fearfully against him.

Tait reached into his pocket, clutched the revolver he had found in Myrna's bag. "Myrna Dombey—" he called the words suddenly and clearly. "If that's Myrna Dombey we want to help you. If it isn't, then come on down the path—with your hands in the air."

For a breathless second there was only silence. Then the thrashing started again, wildly this time, and they saw a figure run down the hillside, away from the path. It was a figure in trousers, unmistakably, and yet Tait dared not shoot for fear it might be Myrna.

"I'm—I'm afraid," whispered Anne with a queer catch in her voice. "Let's hurry."

She began running headlong toward the cottage, heedless of unseen danger. The next thing Tait knew she had thrown open the door, stood staring into an even deeper blackness.

"Myrna? Myrna, please. It's Anne."

Tait flashed a light and held it aloft. There in a corner of the room, the flickering light was reflected in two fear-widened eyes.

Friendship

Friendship is a chain of gold. Shaped in God's all-perfect mold. Each link a smile, a laugh, a tear. A grip of the hand, a word of cheer. Our friend is an unconscious part Of every true beat of our heart; A strength, a growth, whence we derive God's health that keeps the world alive.

Can friend lost friend? Believe it not. The tissue whereof life is wrought, Weaving the separate into one, Nor end hath, nor beginning: Span from subtle threads of destiny, Finer than thought of man can see, God takes not back His gifts divine. While thy soul lives they friend is thine.—Selected.

The following interesting announcement in this morning's mail not only brings a lot of joy and cheer to the dotting parents, but also tends to strengthen the "grandmother" position of the writer of this column: "Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Marshall of Forrest City announce the arrival of Fredrick Calvin Marshall III on Tuesday, October 4, Baptist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn."

Mrs. Dick Forster and little son, Mrs. Alston Foster and Mrs. Billy Bob Herndon have returned from a visit with relatives and friends in Shreveport, La.

The Brookwood P. T. A. held its first meeting of the school year on Wednesday afternoon at the Brookwood school. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Eugene White, Mrs. S. L. Murphy, program chairman introduced Mrs. A. C. Kolb, guest speaker for the afternoon, who gave a most interesting and helpful devotional. The president's message was given by Mrs. Dewey Hendrix and Mrs. B. C. Hyatt gave the P. T. A. objective. After a report of the District meeting recently held in Stamps, Mrs. White introduced the teachers, officers and standing committees. In the count of mothers, Mrs. Hyatt's room registered the majority.

Circle No. 2 at the home of Mrs. Matt Galster and Miss Van Galster. North Hervey street. Circle No. 3 at the home of Mrs. A. F. Haneagan, South Elm street. ## Will Probe Senate it was a breach of the Treasury Department's own regulations; that it was violative of sound administrative principles; that no excuse is to be found for it, and that the action of the collector is to be severely condemned.

Legislators said the committee, if it wished, could ask the Senate to pass a resolution censuring Magruder or recommending his removal. It also might consider remedial legislation covering such cases.

The committee said it found no support for charges that Henry W. Webb was dismissed from the post of Maryland FIA director because he refused to support Lewis.

It considered reports from seven other states, voting to investigate charges of political activity by Indiana WPA employees and deciding to continue its investigation in Georgia, Illinois and Wisconsin.

It dismissed political fraud charges made by Representative Gomer Smith (Dem., Okla.), deflected in the senatorial primary, and said there was no basis to reports the HOLC employees were assessed for political purposes in South Dakota. It approved the removal of George Turpin as deputy United States marshal in Nevada, finding that Turpin "had been engaged in excessive political activity."

Love Finds a Way— In and Out of Jail

From behind the bars of the Davidson County Jail at Lexington, N. C., of which her father, T. C. Kimmel, was jailer, Lula Belle Kimmel reflects on her sadly misplaced affection. She fell in love with James Godwin, one of a pair of desperate criminals confined in the jail. He promised to turn honest and go to church on Sunday. She freed him and his pals, and gave him her father's revolver. She thought they were going to kill another and committed a series of holdups. Lula Belle's father locked her up, then resigned in humiliation. The prisoners were recaptured.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

SPIRITUAL WORSHIP Text: Exodus 20:4-6; 32:1-8 John 4:19-24

One thing that stands out strongly and unmistakably in the history of the Children of Israel is the insistence upon the evil nature of idolatry. The moral degradation of the people upon them is almost invariably attributed to the turning from the worship of Jehovah to the worship of false gods.

Why should this be? What is the difference between the worship of an idol and the use of a symbol in worship? In Christian churches, there are many images.

The difference is that a symbol stands for something very real; when the symbol itself becomes an object of worship instead of a symbol, the resulting worship is idolatry.

But it was not this alone that was in the mind of the Hebrew leaders and prophets, who so strongly denounced the worship of idols. Deeper down was the fact that idolatrous worship was associated with immoral and corrupt practices. The opposition to idolatry was social as well as religious. The leaders of Israel did not wish to see the people corrupted by materialism and false ideals.

There are those who make much of the fact that the religion of Israel was centered around the worship of a tribal god.

That may have some aspects of truth, but the real significance of the Old Testament lies in the extent to which it is not true. The important thing to grasp is that, in the worship of the true prophets and saints of Israel, there was always something emphasized, and something larger than the worship of a tribal god. Almost from the beginning, there is the emphasis upon the one God.

In the early pages of the Old Testament, we have the conception of this one God as personal. Man is made in His image and likeness, and is therefore linked inevitably with His Creator. There, right at the threshold of religious faith, there is something on a far higher plane than idolatry, or even the worship of a tribal god. The promise to Abraham is "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." There is something larger than tribal vision.

When we come down to the prophecies and the Book of Jonah, we have strongly emphasized this fact that God is a God of mercy who is related to other than the "chosen people." Else, what is the meaning of the reference of Jonah's journey to Nineveh and his effort to avoid his mission? It is the idea of that narrow conception of religion, centering around a sectional or tribal God, in conflict with the enlarging conception of a God of the whole universe.

The story of the meeting between Jesus and the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well, as told in the Gospel of John, is very fitting linked with Old Testament passages. When Jesus expounded to this woman the nature of God and the nature of true worship, summing it up in the words, "God is a spirit; and they that worship Him must worship in spirit and truth," he was not stating something new, but was interpreting the very highest in Old Testament religion.

The process of the development of the worship of God as the Loving Father of all mankind is one that is going on today.

There are individuals and peoples that are away back in the tribal stage, for whom God is linked with sectional and national interests and prosperity. But there is an increasing number of men and women who see that God is the God of the whole earth and the God of all peoples, and that His chosen are not those of a particular race or region, but the devout souls who devote themselves to doing justice, loving mercy, and walking humbly before God. There God reveals Himself, and there is found the true worship in spirit and in truth.

Methodist Meet to Close Friday

Rev. Workman to Bring Revival Campaign to an End Here

The Rev. James W. Workman will preach his last sermon in the Methodist revival Friday night at the service beginning at 7:30 o'clock. He will leave by train at 9:30 for Fayetteville.

The Rev. E. H. Martin, who has been leading the singing and bringing special solos at each service, will be present Friday night for his last time. Thursday night the largest congregation of the entire meeting was present. The balcony of the church was filled with young people. Several presented themselves for church membership.

At the Sunday morning congregation at 10:30 the class of new members will be received, and the rite of baptism administered. The pastor will preach at both services Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend the closing service Friday night.

Dictator Injured

unified republic by binding together Czechs and Slovaks remaining within its narrowed borders. The first step came with appointment of Dr. Joseph Tisot, vice president, of the Slovak People's party, as "prime minister for Slovakia" in the new Prague government.

His appointment, granting the Slovaks autonomy within the framework of the Czechoslovak government, was requested by the Slovak People's party which formed a coalition with two other Slovak political groups—the Nationalists and Agrarians. The Slovaks, holding their congress at Zilina, reaffirmed their independence but promised co-operation with the Czechs in an effort to maintain the republic.

Slovakia will have four ministers in the Prague government, in addition to Dr. Tisot.

Slovakia will be in charge of everything in its territory except foreign affairs, national defense, administration of the national state debt and contrivance of loans. Dr. Tisot and his four ministers also will sit in the Czechoslovak Parliament.

The seat of the Slovak government, undoubtedly will be Bratislava, principal city of Slovakia.

Bohemia Nearly Surrounded

The Czech half of the republic—the old kingdom of Bohemia—was almost in a state of siege from slowly encircling German domination.

The prospects faced by Bohemia, as a result of a decision of the International Sudetenland Commission at Berlin were:

1. Occupation of a fifth zone which gave the Germans a major portion of the famed Moravian gateway fortifications once pronounced by a French military commission as "stronger than the Maginot line."

2. Virtual isolation, since rail communications and highway would be barred by German control under the commission plan.

3. Loss of many coal mines and industries under the fifth zone agreements which the Czechs characterized as "summarily approved without asking us."

4. Loss of telephone connections with the outside world. Telegraph and radio would be the only communications left.

Non-Nazi Refugees Fear Trap

The predicament of thousands of non-Nazi Germans, Social Democrats and Communists who fled Sudetenland to the interior of Czechoslovakia was growing serious. Scenes bordering on panic were enacted in Prague as the German circle drew slowly around the capital.

Jews were trying to leave the country but were afraid of being caught in the Sudeten areas.

"Selling Out" to Reich

"We were sold out once; we are now being sold out again," Czechoslovaks cried when they heard about the fifth zone division.

"Our hands are being tied. We appeal to the world to aid us against trickery at Berlin," were some of the bitter comments.

A Propaganda Ministry spokesman said the Czechoslovaks were certain that plottings provided for areas not predominantly German would be forgotten in the rapid surrounding of Bohemia. Some officials said that even if they were held they would be "mere gestures" to strengthen German influence.

The Czechoslovaks criticized harshly use of the 1910 census as a basis for determining the division of population in the fifth zone areas.

The Foreign Office spokesman said, Vojtech Mastny, Czechoslovak minister to Berlin, attempted to present his country's case to the French and British delegations during the four-power conference at Munich.

"They refused to see him," he said, "yet they calmly sat down and proceeded to hand over Bohemia to Germany."

Missouri Sends Richetti to Death

Last of K. C. Station Massacre Trio Is Executed Friday

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—(AP)—Adam Richetti, the last survivor of a desperate trio which terrorized the Midwest a few years ago, was executed in Missouri's lethal gas chamber early Friday for his part in the 1933 Kansas City Union Station massacre of four officers and their prisoner.

National Spending Is Hit by Chamber

High Cost of Maintaining Present Spending Is Pointed Out

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce issued a pamphlet on taxes and government spending Thursday and in it noted "disturbing trends in national fiscal policy."

The publication, entitled "Facts—About Taxes and Public Spending"—contained these statements:

"The cost of government—federal, state and local—amounted from $8,918,000,000 in 1923 to $16,900,000,000 in 1937, or from $79.96 per capita to $130.75.

"At the present rate of public spending it would take the working population of a city of 150,000 inhabitants about 150 years to support the federal government alone for one year.

"Governments of all types collected in taxes $7,234,000,000 in 1923. In 1937 they collected $12,300,000,000.

"If every dollar of income of persons receiving more than $5,000 a year were to be taken in taxes, the sum would pay the cost of numerous governments for only about six months."

middle-of-the-road.

"England and France," Mr. Washburn said, "being part of the European continent, know that which Americans constantly overlook—that in all Europe there is a constant threat of food shortage, and the struggle for human existence inside Germany, in particular, has become almost unbearable."

"The area of Germany today is two-thirds that of Texas, but she supports a population 12 times greater. Czechoslovakia has the area of Arkansas, but also has 12 times Arkansas' population. The land of the United States is relatively new. America, attempting to pass on the problems of Europe, is like unto a well-fed lecturer attempting to advise a half-starved and mentally-harrassed audience."

Czechoslovakia, the speaker pointed out, was a country which other nations put together after the World war—and which other nations equally swiftly took apart 20 years later.

Mr. Washburn said Britain and France sat around the conference table with Germany and Italy—and Britain and France ought to know whether the time had come for democracies to fight for their lives. He said he believed most Americans trusted the British to acquaint themselves with the economic facts of Europe before going to war simply for the sake of a name—"Fascism" or "Bolshevism."

Reddie Team Faces Austin on Friday

Couch Grow to Send Squad Against Texas Eleven at 8 p. m.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—Because the offensive tripped against Hendrix in the opening game last week, Coach Loyal Grow has drilled the Henderson State Teachers College Reddies long and hard this week in an effort to make the squad click against the Stephen F. Austin College Yellow Jackets from Nacogdoches, Texas, at Ouachita Field here at 8 Friday night. It will be the sports feature of the county fair, which opened Thursday.

Coach Grow said his line-up was undetermined, due to failure of several players to perform as well as expected last week. Grow has stressed blocking and pass defense this week.

Stephen F. Austin College held the powerful Southwestern Louisiana College a 7-0 victory last week. Athletic Director S. B. Sudifuth, who coached the Reddies last season, scouted the game at Nacogdoches and reported the Yellow Jackets fairly heavy with several fast men.

Two Razorback Guards

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—Big and bruising, Milt Simington and Wilfred Thorpe, Arkansas guards, are just what the Razorbacks have needed for some time. Simington weighs 223 pounds while Thorpe weighs a mere 208. With this husky pair flanking Captain Loyd Waddell at center, the middle of the line is almost impregnable to assault. Arkansas supporters are counting on this pair to outplay the Baylor Forwards Saturday in the game that will dedicate the university's new stadium.

No. 4—The Notre Dame System

By JERRY BRONDFIELD
NEA Service Sports Writer

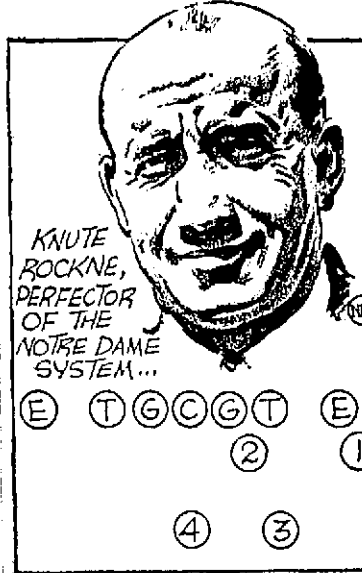

From under the shadow of the Golden Dome have come many of the nation's outstanding coaches. And practically all preach the gospel of Knute Rockne—the Notre Dame system.

The most significant feature about the offense at first sight is the balanced line.

Blocking is even more important in this plan than in any other. The reason is that the ends, who are spread a yard or two, must handle the defending tackles themselves without aid from a wing back. This is no small assignment.

Guards pull out to block, for which reason they must be unusually mobile.

In effect, the Notre Dame system is a single wing formation, but it operates differently. Coming out of the huddle, the backfield lines up in a "T" formation, with the blocking back just behind the center and the other three lined up in a row about five or six yards to the rear of him, forming the "T." The shift brings the offensive set-up, which finds the blocking or No. 2 back a yard behind and slightly to the ring of the right guard. The No. 1 back stations himself a yard behind his high or left end, as the case may be.

The left halfback, which is the threat position, usually takes the fullback post, with the No. 3 back alongside him, and to the rear of the blocking back.

Great versatility is the keynote of the Notre Dame plan.

The wing, freed from the task of aiding the end on the defending tackle, becomes an integral part of all deceptive plays. From this formation can be worked any phase of offense. Three men are in position to take a direct pass from center, and the stage is set for spinners, cutbacks, reverses, and passes of all kinds.

But the basic Notre Dame system depends on blocking—on whether the guards can pull out fast enough and whether the ends can handle their tackles.

Variations have sprung up, and often the end will receive assistance from the wing, or the other blocking back.

J. Smith Ferebee on golf marathon.

Bare-chested J. Smith Ferebee apparently is pretty much in a hurry as he grabs a club from Art Casehella, his caddy, at Lakeside Golf Club, Hollywood. The rush is brought on by the fact that Ferebee, wealthy Chicago broker, has wagered close to $100,000 that he can play 600 holes of golf from coast to coast in four days. Ferebee is making his dash in a private plane. The gentleman hurrying along in the rear with him is Reuben Trane, his backer.

Villanova, Washington, Wisconsin, Diquenne, Santa Clara, and other schools have been getting by famously with variations of the Notre Dame System.

Porkers Face 2nd Conference Team

Baylor Team Reported in Top Condition for Game Saturday

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—A tired University of Arkansas football squad that has had many long practice sessions in summer weather was put through its last long drill of the week here Thursday. The Razorbacks play the Baylor University Bears in the stadium dedication game Saturday.

A victory would lift Arkansas to 500 in Southwest Conference play, with one win and one loss. Texas Christian University won over the Porkers last week, 21-14.

Coach Fred C. Thomsen has used so many different combinations in practice this week that from one to four Razorbacks who did not start in either of the first two games may be on the field at the kickoff against the Bears.

Either Walter Hamberg or Neil Martin may start at halfback instead of Joe Scalet, a sophomore. End John Frieburger, also a sophomore, may replace center Maurice Britt or Howard Hickey, also both sophomores. W. B. Owen is likely to start at guard instead of Milt Simington, a sophomore who has been sick since the TCU battle. There is a possibility that Newman Miller may be given the call at tackle over Randall Stallings. Miller is a sophomore, Stallings a senior.

Everything is ready for the field dedication, with short talks by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator and Governor Carl E. Bailey to precede the game. The government furnished the labor on the stadium. Fourteen army rescue fliers in seven planes will make a flight over the field. The game is scheduled at 2:30 o'clock.

Baylor won over Arkansas last year at Waco, 20-14. They have their two passing and receiving stars, Quarterback Billy Patterson and End Sam Boyd, who gave the Razorbacks so much trouble, available against this season.

Baylor Squad in Top Shape

WACO, Texas.—(AP)—In top physical shape, the Baylor University football squad left Thursday for Fayetteville and the opening of the Southwest Conference season against the University of Arkansas Saturday.

The 31 players will arrive in Muskogee, Okla., Friday morning, then go by bus to Fayetteville to take a light workout in the new stadium.

The squad concentrated on passes again in their last stiff practice. Coach Morley Jennings indicated he would be satisfied with a victory by any score.

John: "Sh! I'm trying to get Honolulu!"

Five-Year Fortune Plan Is Underway

Marshall Field III to Control Vast Estate at Age of 50

CHICAGO — One of the greatest American fortunes begins this month to pass under exclusive control of Marshall Field III.

On his 45th birthday, Sept. 28, Field is to receive from the estate of his grandfather $3,000,000 in cash, and accrued which may amount to $20,000,000. That day he will also begin to receive the annual income from the estate, around $20,000,000.

Five years later Field will inherit the entire estate, conservatively estimated at $200,000,000. He will then hold perhaps the largest personal estate in the country.

Marshall Field, founder of the Chicago department store bearing his name, died in 1906. The estate was left in an elaborate trust which immobilized by law. In 1920, Marshall Field III tried to break the will, arguing that it was contrary to public interest to tie up so large a fortune. The courts refused to break the will and the million dollars the lawyers dragged down never denied it. Income simply piled up in trust.

Fought Marshall Field II is sole heir to the fortune. His brother Henry, who was to have shared it, died of illness incurred while with the British army during the World War. He enlisted as a student in England.

Marshall III enlisted in the United States Army as a private. He went with the old First Cavalry to the Mexican border for training. And Beginning this month, Marshall Field III, above, enters into a series of inheritances which will make him at the end of five years one of the richest men in the United States.

when the outfit became the 122nd Field Artillery he went through the Fort Sill School of fire, and then to France. The regiment went to the front September, 1918, with the Prairie Division, and Field emerged a captain.

After the war, he headed reemployment work for Chicago's returning veterans. He was an organizer of the American Legion.

Young Field went to work for a bond house, then organized his own investment company, from which he later withdrew as president sure of personal affairs demanded more and more time.

He rode to hounds with the Prince of Wales in England, and bought a 2000-acre estate on Long Island. His horses ran in the big British and American races. In 1930 he learned to fly.

Endorsed Roosevelt

In 1927 the Field estate had begun a $4,000,000 low-cost housing project for Chicago. This was generally believed the result of Marshall III's increasing sense of social responsibility. Fifteen huge corporations, banking and industrial, carried the Field name on their boards of directors by 1933.

Yet in the 1936 presidential campaign, Marshall Field III was the biggest name affixed to an endorsement of President Roosevelt drawn up by 30 business and professional leaders and made public by Francis Biddle, former chairman of the NLRB. Last year became a trustee of the University of Chicago.

Field has been married three times, divorced twice, from Evelyn Marshall in 1930, and from Mrs. Audrey James Coats in 1934. His present wife was Mrs. Ruth Pruyn Phipps, whom he married in 1936.
